

DILEMMA OF A DOCTOR

Percy Edwin Deaton, licensee of the Hotel Manly, stated in the Divorce Court to-day that he had caught his wife sharing a bedroom with a Macquarie-street doctor.

Deaton sought a divorce from Dulcie Hope Deaton on the ground of her adultery with Dr. Horace Layton Spearman.

Deaton who was married in October, 1934, said he became suspicious of his wife's actions after she moved to her mother's place at Dee Why in April.

On October 4 he followed Dr. Spearman and his wife from Romano's Road House, at Liverpool, to Mansion House private hotel, city which they entered at 3 a.m. He watched the building until after noon when the couple came out and drove to Fig Tree, where they dined.

Next morning in the same hotel he and a private detective watched until Mrs. Deaton came out of the bedroom and went to the bathroom.

They then entered the bedroom and saw Dr. Spearman asleep in bed. "I don't understand," said the doctor when they woke him.

Anxious To Marry

When Mrs. Deaton returned to the bedroom she said, "You have enough on us to get what you want. Now will you go?"

Mrs. G. Osborne, who appeared for Mrs. Deaton and Dr. Spearman, on the question of costs, said that his clients were anxious to marry at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Justice Edwards adjourned the case until to-morrow to allow the parties to come to Court and express their desire of marrying.
